Slade Wood near Tiverton, Devon

Description

Slade Wood is part of a larger ancient wood on the southern edge of an archetypal combe valley just outside the southern boundary of Exmoor National Park. The pretty market town of Bampton is 4 miles to the east and the wider facilities of Tiverton are 15 minutes by car. The M5 (junction 27) is 17 miles to the southeast.

The wood occupies a lower valley situation with a northerly aspect overlooking a delightful trout stream. It sits amidst other ancient woodland within a wider Devon landscape of rolling pasture, woods and hedgerows.

Slade and the adjacent woods are designated as 'Ancient Semi-Natural Woodland' suggesting it has been continuously wooded for at least 400 years. Most of the trees here are the natural successors of many previous generations.

Slade Wood is predominantly oak dating from the middle of the last century, interspersed with silver birch and punctuated by some older oak stems. Towards the streamside there are some maturing beech and there is a notable wild cherry near the southeast corner of the wood. The shrub layer is composed of hazel and occasional holly plus a variety of young hardwoods regenerating from the parent trees. The ground flora is typical of ancient woodland and includes bluebell, primrose, bilberry, wood anemone, wood sorrel and a range of ferns. This in conjunction with the gentle slopes makes for easy walking throughout.

The Iron Mill valley is delightfully detached from the modern world and the ancient woodland habitat means this is still the preserve of wildlife. Red deer feed in the glades, woodland birds abound in the tree canopy and buzzards wheel overhead. At night the air is charged with the sights and sounds of its nocturnal inhabitants including owls, foxes and badgers, whilst bats patrol the river and rides in pursuit of insects.

Slade offers excellent recreational opportunities, with fishing rights for two rods on the Iron Mill stream effectively giving access along the riverside to the north of the wood. Meanwhile the upper southern edge (accessed by a soft ride) offers a secluded place on modest slopes for quiet enjoyment. Sportsmen will enjoy the possibility of the occasional pheasant for the pot. The camp fire will be supplied by fallen dead-wood, and standing thinnings (a felling licence is in place) will allow those of a more active mind to indulge in a little silviculture and woodcraft.

There is a full vehicular right of access on a recently upgraded all-weather hard track that is suitable for 2WD.

In our view very few woods in this price bracket offer such a diverse range of attractive woodland attributes - and all amidst unrivalled Devon countryside.

Directions & Access

From junction 27 of the M5 head west on the A361 for about 6½ miles. Turn right at the first roundabout onto the A396 signed for Bampton. Continue for 5 miles until the next roundabout (by the Exeter Inn) and take the first exit left (staying on the A396) signed for Minehead.

Slade Wood near Tiverton, Devon

Take the footpath west through the gate (with the Red Rock Forestry sign) and continue for 500m until you cross a stream (B on plan). Slade Wood is on your left after this point.
